The judges examined more than 140 applications submitted in 18 categories. The basics included: number of employees, revenue range, percentage of net income growth, employee improvement and benefit programs, company involvement in civic and nonprofit groups. Companies were also asked to provide detailed information about product and services, awards, corporate philosophy, goals and mission, innovations and diversity initiatives.

The Leaf Chronicle (a Gannett newspaper) purchased one (1) Quipp PACKMAN Packaging System and floor equipment to be installed in their production facility in Clarksville, TN. Gannett was the first to purchase the Quipp PACKMAN after successful testing it in their Melbourne, FL facility in the beginning of 2004.

The Herald also purchased one Quipp PACKMAN Packaging System to install in their facility in Monterey, CA. The Herald is the first Knight-Rider newspaper to purchase a Quipp PACKMAN.

"A key driver of Quipp's recent growth has been the development and acquisition of new products," according to Mike Kady, Quipp's President & CEO. "The Quipp PACKMAN enables our customers to produce well formed bundles of heavily inserted newspapers at exceptional speeds. Also, the machine occupies a very compact space."
